October 24: National Bologna Day

Bologna (“baloney.”) is usually made out of pork and contains various seasonings, but it also can be made out of other meats—there’s even vegetarian bologna.

Bologna gets its name from a city in Italy also called Bologna. Bologna there is called mortadella. Mortadella is essentially the grandfather of the bologna we know and love.

... American bologna generally consists of pork, beef or a combination of the two. The meat is then blended together seamlessly. Spices and other ingredients might be added to the mix. Some of the more popular additions include:

- Coriander
 - Celery seed
 - Allspice
 - Nutmeg
 - Myrtle berries
 - Black pepper
- (Except for the myrtle berries, these are common pickling spices)

Bologna has been a staple in people’s lunches for a long time. Some slices of bologna between two slices of white bread with a few condiments makes for a delectable meal.

The Origin of Bologna?

Mortadella, the precursor to modern bologna, has been around for centuries. It became a real delicacy in the town of Bologna as early as the 1400s.

When America was founded, immigrants would come over to the country and bring their cuisines with them. This foreign introduction of bologna to America might be a reason why the word is pronounced very differently from how it’s spelled. One theory for how the pronunciation came into play is that when bologna came to America and was introduced in New York, people with different dialects had to pronounce it. This led to people pronouncing it like “blarney” or “baloney.” The pronunciation stuck, and that’s what people in America continue to call it to this day.

Ways To Eat Bologna:

1. the traditional bologna sandwich
2. fried bologna
3. For breakfast, put some fried bologna on a bagel topped with bacon and a fried egg
4. try a fried bologna sandwich topped with fried onions.

Many fondly remember bologna as a big part of their childhoods. Even kids that are particularly picky eaters should have no problem eating it. Bologna sandwiches are a simple lunch to pack for kids.

Remember when bologna was $.35 a pound?

On the morning of October 16, 1962, the above photo was one of a set shown to US President John F. Kennedy, confirming that the Soviet Union had placed nuclear missiles in communist Cuba, 90 miles off the coast of Florida.

This kicked off thirteen extraordinary days of tension and brinkmanship between the two rivals. For days the Kennedy cabinet debated in private what to do about the situation, and on October 22, Kennedy went public with the crisis by announcing a 'quarantine' of Cuba - a carefully used word, since a blockade would technically be an act of war.

More tense moments passed. Soviet ships attempted to penetrate the blockade but turned back. A US spy plane was shot down over Cuba. Eventually, after a long period of talks, Kennedy and Nikita Khrushchev agreed that the Soviets would withdraw the missiles in exchange for a public assurance the US would not invade Cuba, as well as a secret deal that America would remove its missiles in Italy and Turkey.
